“The overdose crisis doesn’t just shatter families, it fractures communities. The losses reach beyond one person, one family, or one neighbourhood. They ripple through classrooms, workplaces, and the shared spaces we all call home. But in a time where connection and safety matter more than ever, overdose reminds us how deeply intertwined our lives truly are.”

— Penington Institute, 2025

These gatherings will include opportunities to share stories, light candles, and reflect together as one community, one big family, driven by hope.

Your presence matters.
